About

SPITTING IN THE FACE OF THE DEVIL

Can you imagine discovering that your father is a predator?

Hailed by critics as “brilliant”, “masterful” and “unforgettable”, Spitting In The Face Of The Devil is New York monologist Bob Brader's gripping true story of discovering that his abusive and charismatic ex-Marine father is a pedophile. Brader's daring, uplifting and often comedic play has toured the U.S. and Canada to tremendous critical acclaim.

A powerful tale of personal survival and triumph that pertains to today's focus on sexual predators, Spitting In The Face Of The Devil is a 7-Time Best of Fest Award-Winner, including “Best Show” of the London Fringe and “Best Script” and “Best Encore” at NYC's United Solo Theatre Festival.

Bob Brader - Writer/Performer

is an award winning writer, actor and monologist. Spitting In The Face Of The Devil, Bob's acclaimed solo show, has toured all over the U.S. and Canada and won 7 Best of Awards including Best Show of the London Fringe and Best Script and Best Encore at the United Solo Theatre Festival. Bob's brand new retelling of the story on the RISK! Podcast was called by RISK! creator and host Kevin Allison: "An absolute stunner. Bob Brader's story 'Spitting in the Face Of The Devil' is one of our best episodes ever." Bob made his international debut at the London Fringe Festival with his second solo show, Preparation Hex, a hemorrhoid tale and love story, which toured Canada and played in NYC at the Directors Company and the United Solo Festival. His new monologue, Smoker, had its world premiere on Theatre Row as part of United Solo, where it won the Best Autobiographical Show Award and went on to a highly acclaimed Canadian tour. Bob's numerous acting credits include headlining the two-actor NYC run as well as the sold-out international tour of CIRCLE (Most Daring Show, London Fringe). He was in the original cast of We Call Her Benny and performed in both the recent tour and original five-month NYC run of BITE with JMTC Theatre, for which he is Executive Director. Other New York Theatre credits include Bryan Enk and Matt Gray's supernatural theatrical serial, Penny Dreadful, at the Brick Theater (Teddy Roosevelt) and numerous DMTheatrics' productions: Girls School Vampire, Bitch Macbeth, Who in the Hell is the Real Live Lorelei Lee? and Antony and Cleopatra (Caesar, OOB Award). Film credits include Eat Me and DelanoCelli Productions' award winning Brooklyn in July. Bob trained with the Stella Adler Conservatory at the Tisch School of the Arts and is a member of the United Solo Academy, SAG-AFTRA and the Dramatists Guild.

Suzanne Bachner - Director/Developer

is an award-winning playwright and director. She is the director and developer of Bob Brader's internationally acclaimed, award-winning solo shows including Spitting In The Face Of The Devil and Smoker. Other solo show directing: Gloria Rosen's award-winning Listen...Can You Hear Me Now?, Sarah Elizabeth Greer's Bio-Hazard: A Relative Comedy (United Solo Europe 2016), Canadian Burlesque star Rosie Bitts' Stories of Love and Passion (U.S. and Canadian tour) and her new play, The Good Adoptee (Best Autobiographical Script and Best Actress, United Solo: extensive and ongoing U.S. tour). Her play, CIRCLE, was called "ingenious" by The New York Times and ran for five months Off Broadway followed by a Sold-Out International Tour where it was awarded "Most Daring Show" of the London Fringe. Playwriting and directing credits: a six month NYC run of her cult hit, Icons & Outcasts; a five month NYC run and an international tour of BITE and multiple NYC productions of her celebrated kaleidoscopic memoir play, We Call Her Benny, which Broadway World called “the future of theatre”. Directing: Frank D. Gilroy's The Subject Was Roses at the Celebration Theatre in Los Angeles and the short film, Jennifer Monroe, P.I., a finalist in Flicks on 66. Suzanne studied playwriting with Romulus Linney and Adrienne Kennedy and holds an MFA from the Actors Studio Drama School at the New School University. Coming to Terms with Abusive Dad

By Joe Belanger, The London Free Press
Wednesday, June 11, 2014 4:39:15 EDT PM

By no measure was Bob Brader's childhood idyllic.

His was one scarred by the physical and emotional abuse heaped upon him and his mother by his ex-Marine father, Bob, a gay pedophile.

That's the focus of Brader's show, Spitting in the Face of the Devil, on at London Convention Centre for the 2014 London Fringe Festival.

This is a courageous, poignant show, a brilliantly told story of pain, heartache and recovery that relies on Brader's substantial acting talents to tell a horrific story while bringing the various family members and friends to life.

From his opening words to its conclusion, it's a riveting, disturbing, funny, heartwarming and inspiring story.

"When I got the phone call that The Devil was dead, I felt nothing," he says at the start.

That's not surprising, as we quickly begin to see that the seemingly 'normal' family portrait on the stage is nothing but an illusion.

Using only his voice and physical movements, Brader presents the characters of his father, mother, grandparents, uncle, friends and lovers who all suffered directly and indirectly from his father's physical and emotional abuse and the sexual abuse suffered, not by Brader, but his uncle and two childhood friends.

The lighting of this show is beautifully brilliant, at times almost fading to black as this dark story is told.

Brader was beaten by his father for bed wetting as a child, ridiculed for his early attempts at performing impressions in school variety shows and humiliated by his father's pedophilia, all of it explored with abject honesty and Brader's keen eye and recall of details.

Brader doesn't shy away from the truth, even as he tells of the impact of his father's abuse later in his own life.

It is rare for men to stand up and tell their stories of childhood abuse and Brader has to be lauded, if only for his courage. But don't be discouraged by the dark subject matter. This is a funny, engaging marathon of storytelling that not only delivers understanding, but inspires — a must see performance that will make you laugh, cry and just feel good.

"Spitting in the Face of the Devil"

By LOUIS B. HOBSON

The "devil" in Bob Brader's one-man show SPITTING IN THE FACE OF THE DEVIL is his father. It's an apt description of the man but hardly an adequate one. Bob Brader Sr. was a monster of epic proportions. He regularly beat his son when the young boy wet his bed. He tormented and taunted the boy on an almost daily basis.

It seems Bob Sr. never wanted children. Well not to father them at least as we learn early on in the shocking memory play. Bob Brader Sr. was a pedophile who preyed on young boys including several of his son's junior high school friends.

This is disturbing subject matter to be certain but in Brader's talented, sensitive, caring hands SPITTING IN THE FACE OF THE DEVIL is as compelling and engrossing as it is devastating and unforgettable.

Brader's genius both as a writer and a performer is that he makes us want to take this cathartic journey with him and that is no easy feat.

At the performance I attended Brader had the audience in the palm of his hand. One moment we gasp in disbelief as when his mother agreed to take her husband back when he assured her he had cured himself of his obsession. The next minute we'd laugh when the young Bob recalled watching ROLLERCOASTER and EARTHQUAKE with a thundering speaker at the back of the theatre creating the illusion of being in the film. Then there is the marvelous anecdote about his battling cockroaches in his first apartment. He knows we need comic relief before we return to accounts of Brader Sr.'s evil.

Even as a child, Brader's forte was impersonations and he has honed this skill so that he can play numerous characters of an age and sex in his story.

This is one play I did not want to end. I wanted to find out more about how Brader was rescued or rescued himself from his own downward spiral. As with so many victims of abuse he was filled with self-loathing. He claimed it was because "the devil" had got inside him. To exorcise the demon, Brader turned to alcohol and drugs. Today he is a successful actor and writer and is in a happy, fulfilling relationship with Suzanne Bachner who directed the play. I cannot recommend SPITTING IN THE FACE OF THE DEVIL too highly. It is one of those productions that lingers with you long after you've left the theatre. You'll need and want to vent your emotions.

Spitting in the Face of the Devil

I was waiting for that one show to come along this year that knocked me right out of my seat. Spitting in the Face of the Devil, a solo show by the energy ball known as Bob Brader, is that show. Detailing a very painful childhood dominated by a terrorizing father (“The Devil”), this performance has a script that sinks into you like a meat-hook and doesn’t let go for 80 minutes. New York resident Brader has mounted this show at Fringes all over the world and won accolades for it—and no wonder: this is a polished, expertly written piece of theatre. And while the story of child abuse by a closeted gay man—and the rage that kept boiling over on his family—is absolutely enthralling, it’s Brader’s performance that makes this show so brilliant. He has an endless arsenal of facial expressions and character switches, complete with different voices and accents. Definitely the performance of this year’s Fringe, and my vote so far for Pick of the Fringe, Spitting in the Face of the Devil is a triumph. And I never say shit like that.

—Jason Schreurs

THEATER REVIEW: “Spitting In The Face Of The Devil”

Jean Lowerison - SDGLN Theater Critic

The devil in question is Bob Brader’s violent Marine Corps veteran father, who made his son’s young life miserable with near-daily beatings, constant belittling and threats.

But he was a different person to others, a hail-fellow-well-met type known and apparently loved by everyone.

Brader describes life with father in his harrowing and powerful one-man show “Spitting In The Face Of The Devil,” playing only three more shows at New Village Arts Theatre in Carlsbad. The show is directed by Brader’s wife Suzanne Bachner, who also wrote and directs the main-stage show “Brilliant Mistake.”

Brader explains how his father expropriated his son’s male friends – first David (in fifth grade) and later Richard, spending far more time with them than with his son – and recounts his shock when Richard told him his father was gay.

It’s a difficult story to hear, but extremely well presented – Brader eventually went to NYU’s well-known Tisch School to study acting, much to his father’s disgust, and he’s a riveting actor as well as storyteller.

Proceeds from Brader’s four-night show will go to the Women’s Resource Center in Oceanside, which provides shelter, crisis intervention and counseling and education programs for victims of domestic abuse and sexual assault.

Spitting In The Face Of The Devil in the United Solo Festival

Indie Theater Now asked Bob Brader a few questions about his play Spitting In The Face Of The Devil. The theme of this interview is "Writing About Social Issues".

- What's this play about (in a few sentences); and what particular current issues are you addressing in it?

Spitting In The Face Of The Devil is the true story of discovering that my charismatic ex-Marine father was a pedophile. The main issues are of child abuse and child sexual abuse but there are a lot of underlying themes like how we learn from our parents (both good and bad), standing tall and not letting anyone tell you that you cannot do something. The show is about growing up as a survivor, so it has a lot of different themes running through it.

- Why is this issue/these issues important to you? Why should it be important to the audience?

To me, these issues are important because nobody wants to talk about them. Nobody wants to think about a child being beat or worse being sexually abused, and that is exactly why I felt the need to write this show. We need to talk about these issues, because they are still happening today, everyday. The more we talk about it, the less caught off guard we will be when we see it happening, or hear about it happening. The easier it will be to confront and prevent the problem and stop blaming the victim, especially when we see it happening in our own backyard.

- Can a play actually bring about social change? How?

Absolutely. I am not saying that Spitting In The Face Of The Devil is anywhere close to these shows, but look at what Angels in America did for understanding the AIDS epidemic, look at what Hair did for understanding a generation. Theater has the power to make us sit up and pay attention. Everything is happening right in front of us; it has the power to suck us into a story and helps us comprehend issues we know nothing about.

- If you could get one real person (past or present) to be the spokesperson for your play, who would you choose and why; and what would you want them to tell people about your work?

That would have to be the master of the monologue, Mr. Spalding Gray. I wrote Spitting In The Face Of The Devil in a Spalding Gray style. I wanted it to be as honest as one of his monologues and in the beginning I did the whole show behind a desk. We kept the honesty, but lost the desk. I would want him to tell people how we are able to tell a gripping powerful story with humor and heart. I would want him to tell people that it is not scary to take this journey and it is one you will not forget. Honestly, I would have just loved him to have seen the show. Performing one of my monologues in front of Spalding Gray was one of my dreams.

- Which is more important to you in your playwriting, and why: to tell an authentic story, to make the audience laugh, to make the audience cry, or to make the audience think?

If you tell an authentic story you can get an audience to laugh, cry and think. For me being authentic is important. Everything that I talk about in my monologues are things that I have truly experienced. They are my thoughts and feelings. I don't believe in lying in a monologue, just to make the story more interesting. Truth is stranger than fiction, and it makes a great story.
